MORSE IN TOMBS, BEGINS FIGHT ON 15-YEAR SENTENCE

Convicted Banker's Attorney Obtains a Writ of Error After Court Announces the Penalty and Also Makes Application for Bail.

CURTIS FREED BY JUDGE ON SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Crowd in Court Applauds the Judge as He Declares the Dethroned Ice King, for Whom He Finds No Excuse, Must Go to Prison.

Charles W. Morse, formerly the Ice King, and fifteen months ago considered financially invulnerable behind a bulwark of $20,000,000, was today sentenced to fifteen years at hard labor in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., by Judge Hough in the United States Circuit Court.

Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, was sentenced to five years imprisonment, but upon the recommendation of the jury and the United States District-Attorney, sentence was suspended.

Judge Hough allowed counsel for Morse ten days in which to file whatever motions they may deem necessary. Curtis left the court-room with his wife, practically a free man.

MORSE GOES BACK TO TOMBS.

After Morse had been kept at the Federal Building for two hours he was taken back to the Tombs.

Once more he was spared the ignominy of handcuffs. Between Marshal Henkel and Wallace Macfarlane, one of his lawyers, Morse went up Broadway to Leonard street and through Leonard street to the Tombs. A big, jeering crowd followed along behind the trio. Morse never looked back. He was taken at once to the cell where he slept last night with Curtis and was locked up. He asked for copies of the afternoon papers, said he wanted no lunch and sent a sealed message to his wife.

Late this afternoon Lawyer Macfarlane took the first steps in what will be Morse's new fight for liberty and another trial.

Gets Writ of Error.

From Justice Lacombe he obtained a writ of error returnable on Dec. 3. The writ was based upon the usual grounds—exceptions taken by the defense during the trial and exceptions to the indictment itself.

Thus armed, Mr. Macfarlane next went through the necessary formality of moving

ARE WIVES NEEDED IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD?

Then Read How a Town Too Full of Women Found Husbands.

It's a true story. It will be told exclusively in next Sunday's World. And here are some other features of the Sunday World that shouldn't be missed:

The words and music of "Keep on Making Love," the best song in "Birdland," the vaudeville hit of the season; The present-day demands of the stage for beauties of the society type;

The strange plea of a convict sentenced for murder, asking an honored and beautiful wife and mother to reveal her past and hidden history in order to save him from the penalty of the law;

"The Beautiful Trousseau of the Future Duchess of the Abruzzi," an illustrated article that will be of special interest to women;

"Teaching the Blind to Know About Animals," how a school for those who cannot see instructs its pupils as to the forms of beasts and birds;

In the Sunday World's famous "Want Directory" will be printed 7,000 separate "prosperity" advertisements;

The early morning sale of the Sunday World is so great that it is more advisable than ever before that orders for copies be left with newsdealers in advance. You better attend to it to-night.

$7,000,000 HOME OF STEEL MAGNATE SCHWAB IS CLOSED

Riverside Drive Palace Is Deserted Except by Care-taker.

WINDOWS BOARDED UP.

Owner of Most Expensive Residence Will Live at Bethlehem, Near Steel Plant.

Following an announcement to a discharged servant that he could no longer afford to keep open his magnificent home on Riverside Drive, Charles M. Schwab has boarded up the $7,000,000 palace and installed a caretaker in charge.

The Schwab mansion, facing on Riverside Drive, occupies the centre of the site including the entire square block bounded by Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth streets and extending back to West End avenue. It has been regarded as the most expensive establishment in America.

Some time ago, it was announced that Mr. Schwab would make his permanent home in Bethlehem, Pa., as his duties as president of the Bethlehem Steel Company demand that he spend the greater part of his time in the vicinity of the plant.

However, when he built the tremendously costly pile on Riverside Drive he was living the greater part of the time in Pennsylvania or travelling abroad.

Millions Spent on Interior.

Not only has the Schwab palace been closed, but the stables as well. The stables are at No. 229 West Seventy-sixth street, and were intended originally to shelter as fine a string of horses as usually appertains to such an elaborate establishment as the Schwab home.

After he had built the vast show place Mr. Schwab was as lavish in fitting it up as he had been in providing building material and surface area. It is estimated that millions were swallowed up in the purchase of trappings and art objects, imported furniture, tapestries and Oriental rugs. Each room in this great house are up a fortune in furnishings.

The Schwab palace was years under construction, but when it was completed the young steel millionaire moved in with fifty servants. Thereafter it was his recognized home, and even when he was travelling there was always a staff of servants on hand to care for the mansion and guard its treasures.

Immense Running Expense.

The young man had been warned before he built the house that he would never find it homelike, and that the cost of keeping it up would prove a serious drain on even his immense resources. It was later hinted that the mansion was in the market. This was denied, but it was learned that the retention of servants had been cut down.

Mr. Schwab sold many horses, until finally his neighbors learned that there was only one horse in commission. The great pile now wears the forlorn aspect of a deserted castle.

Mr. Schwab has rented a fine house at No. 407 Delaware avenue, South Bethlehem, for one year. He left this city yesterday for San Francisco, where he will be engaged for a fortnight on affairs connected with the Union Iron Works, a subsidiary concern to the Bethlehem Steel Company.

In the course of a year, it is said, he expects to readjust his affairs that he can return to Riverside Drive and maintain the huge establishment with fitting splendor of equipment.

FIRST SNOW-FALL HEAVY IN NORTHERN NEW YORK.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Snow to the depth of several inches, the first of the season, fell throughout Northern New York today.

DEAFNESS—HEAD NOISES.

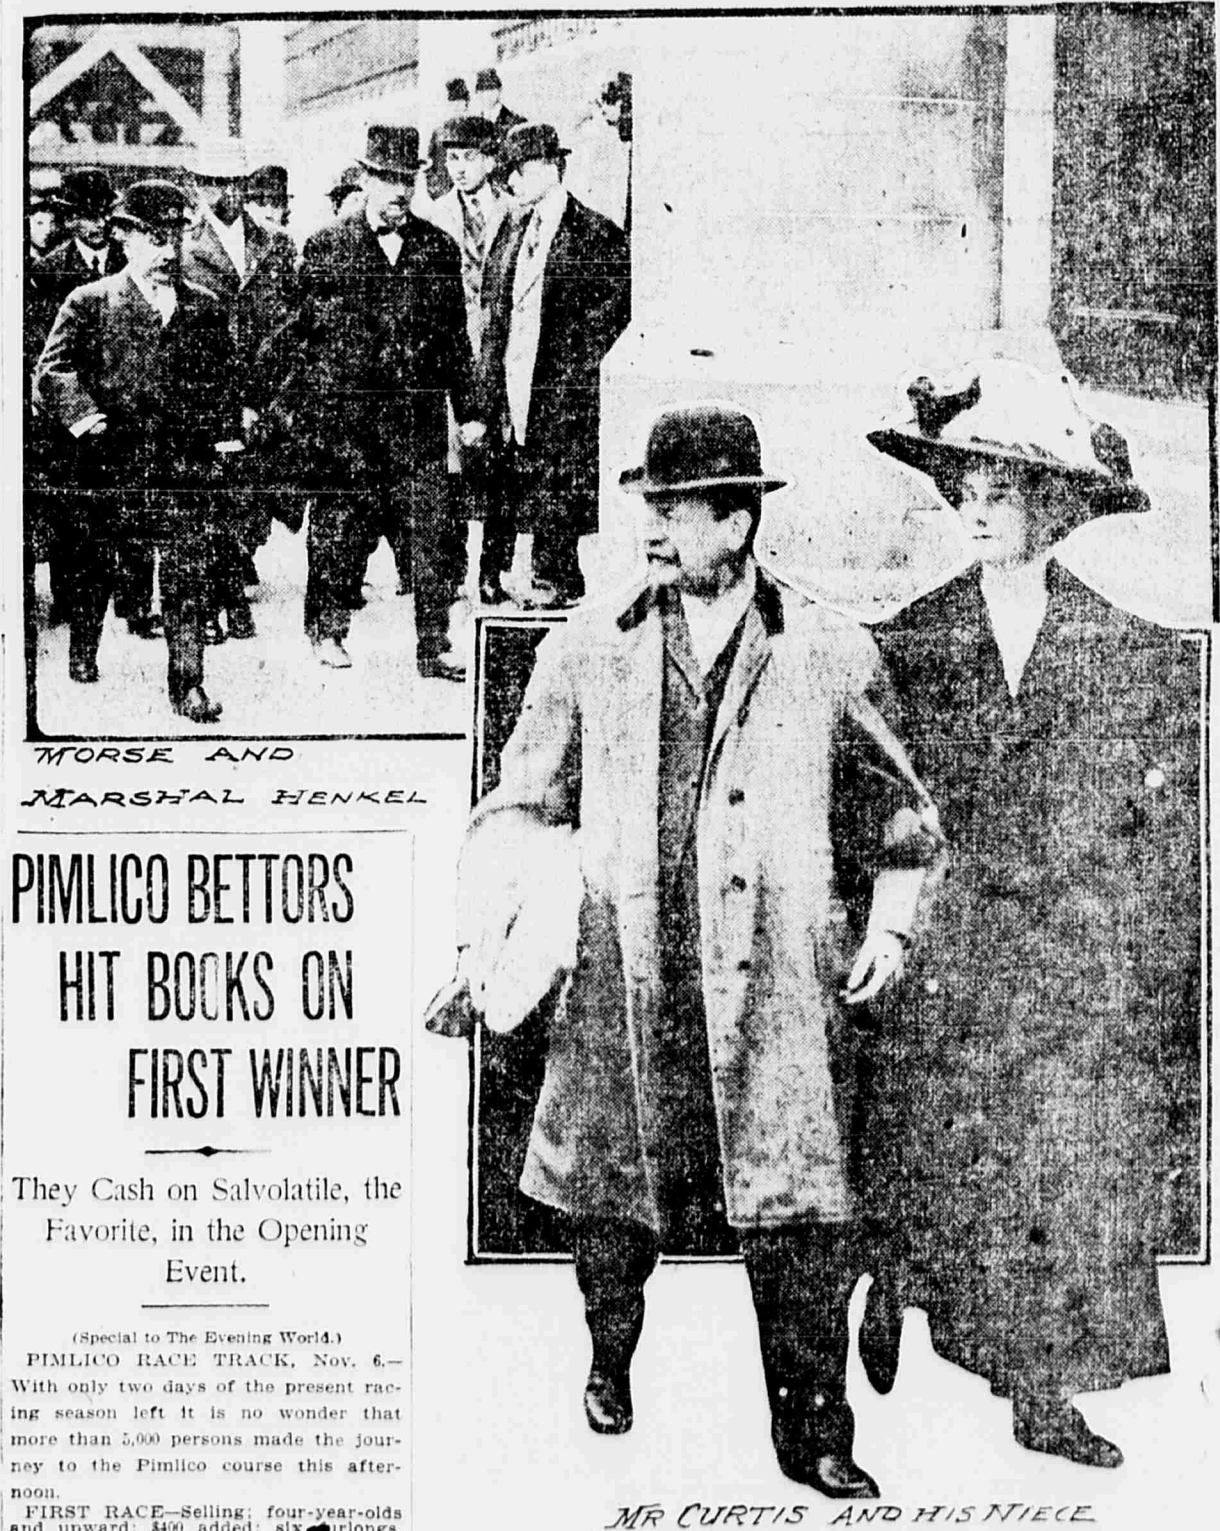

Successfully Relieved by Leonard Invaluable Ear Drums and Method.

It is a surprising fact that one person out of every four in the U. S. suffers from deafness and head noises. It is also a fact that physicians have not been as successful as they could wish in curing them. It has remained for a deaf man to accomplish this. A. O. Leonard, suite 200, No. 161-115 Broadway, corner 27th st., N. Y. City, was deaf and suffered from head noises for thirty-five years. By the use of his Invaluable Ear Drum and Method of relief, when he has been granted a patent he hears almost perfectly and his head noises have ceased. Mr. Leonard will send information to anyone who desires it, or will grant a free trial to any one who will call at his office.

ROOSEVELT NOT AVERSE TO TAKING A SEAT IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—That President Roosevelt may be the successor of Senator Platt in the Senate is considered by many in Washington as not at all improbable.

Those who regard this as possible declare that they have assurance from the President himself that he would not be entirely averse to the acceptance of the Senatorial office under conditions as they will be after March 4. So far as is known, he had made no recent expression on the subject.

15-YEAR-OLD BOY'S BODY DUG OUT OF BROOKLYN CELLAR

Wreckers of Building on Sands Street Find Dead Lad Amid Debris.

The body of a fifteen-year-old boy was unearthed in the cellar of No. 102 Sands street, Brooklyn, today by workmen who are stripping the building, one of two three-story frame structures that are being torn down for the Brooklyn approach to the Manhattan Bridge.

Two workmen digging in a heap of debris discovered the body. Dr. F. E. McCaul, of the Navy Hospital, who examined the body, said that the boy had been dead about two months.

The body was five feet, five inches tall and weighing 110 pounds. The clothing consisted of a blue serge suit, with knickerbockers, peaked cap and laced shoes.

Until Sept. 1 the building was occupied by two Japanese store keepers, Yo Shira and Ishikawa. Ishikawa was found, but could not identify the body. He said that occasionally while he kept a store in the building he permitted men and boys to sleep in the cellar.

An autopsy will be necessary to determine the cause of death. Central office detectives were assigned to investigate the case and discover whether or not a murder had been committed.

Changes Cause Wonder.

The above is the result of the swinging of Commissioner Bingham's big stick this afternoon. Many of the changes are a mystery to the rank and file of the department, especially the reduction of Inspector Hussey, for a long time known as the model officer.
